Our thematic work - update

Our thematic programmes are structured programmes to explore the contribution of the third sector to a particular policy area. This year we worked in a variety of fields.

Building community resilience

We worked with Scottish Government's Community Resilience Unit and local resilience groups to improve their understanding of good practice in building and evaluating community resilience. We produced a toolkit. Download here. To get a flavour of the work read the blog by Kate Anderson, Scottish Government about what she learnt from visiting community resilience groups.

Working with Citizens Advice and their statutory funders, we supported them to make monitoring and evaluation of advice more rational and more useful. The work concluded with the publication of Indicators for Measuring Citizens Advice here.

Thrive

Commissioned by Spirit of 2012, we supported 11 projects funded by Legacy 2014 Physical Activity fund, to capture and share their learning about what does and doesn't work, and why. Projects wrote case studies telling their story. During this project the Change Record template and the Thrive online evaluation tool were developed.

Shining a light on third sector evidence

Can't believe it's time for our AGM again which also means it's time to publish our annual review. This year we have shone a light on our work to support the gathering and use of third sector evidence. Read the colour version of the review or black and white version here.

Our full annual report and financial statement is here.

At the AGM we welcomed two new trustees - Diarmid Hearns who works for National Trust for Scotland and Susan Lowes from Marie Curie.

And after six years of service we said goodbye and thank you to Anita Morrison (pictured left) and Derek Young who had served for three years.
